Faith

A cat named Faith lived in St Augustine's Church in London during the Second World War. She had one kitten in 1940. Her baby was named Panda. Everyone was very happy with both Faith and Panda. One day Faith took Panda into the cold basement under the church. Everyone tried to convince her to bring her baby back into the warm church, but she refused. Then the bombings started. For days and nights, bombs fell on London. Faith stayed in the basement with Panda. One night a bomb destroyed the church. Both cats lived. Everyone was very happy with Faith because she was so loyal to her baby. She became a symbol that helped the people of London throughout the war. The Archbishop of Canterbury gave her a special medal to honour her for her achievement.
